Applause for Paula
Forevers, friends thankful for Jamerson’s dedication
BY KATHRYN MORTON
Paula Jamerson brought a sparkle to her work — and workplace — at Kilgore College.
“My favorite memory of Paula will always be her crazy and colorful office,” Rangerette Director Dana Blair said of KC’s coordinator of alumni relations, who retired Feb. 28. “When you walked in, there were flowers, vases, wrapping paper, bows, sequins, glitter and projects all over the room. She was always working on a wonderful gift or decoration that would brighten someone’s day. She also knew where everything was and did not miss a beat with all of her many duties at the college.”

Please see more Paula on page 10.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

We have created a sisterhood

Greetings Forevers,

This year has already been one for the heart. In December, Rangerette Forever and drill team icon Lisa Owens Miller passed away after an extended illness. Lisa led the way directing one of the best precision dance programs at J.J. Pearce High School. She created a program that raised the bar in the drill team world for high schools all over Texas and beyond. Her choreography and leadership kept her in the forefront of Texas and beyond. Her influence continues today. Lisa was a member of the 34th Line, 1973–75.

It is unfortunate, but the world we live in can be unpredictable. Director Dana Blair and her daughter, Alexia, were in a life-threatening situation after Christmas. They are safe, but there are ramifications to the incident, and our hearts and prayers continue to go out to them as they put the situation behind them. Dana is an irreplaceable part of our organization, and it makes us pause to think about what is really important in the grand scheme of life.

Lastly, Paula Jamerson, a loyal and dedicated person to Kilgore College, the Rangerettes and the Forevers, has retired to be with her husband. The loss of Paula’s smiling face and creative touch is leaving a hole everywhere we turn. She was the most creative person ever, and she made everything look so easy. Paula was always willing to do anything that was asked of her, and there were always multiple people asking. She could do it all, and she is already missed in so many ways.

The Forever organization is more than we ever imagined it would be. The gathering of members from all lines and all generations has become more than a place to “get together.” We have created a sisterhood of lives, diverse and unique as ever thought possible. We gather in love and respect for the organization that Miss Davis conceived, Mrs. Covin perfected and Dana has elevated. Out of this bond, because of a common experience, we have created a sense of loyalty and passion not just for the organization but for the lives it has touched. Forevers are fierce in our sense of responsibility to each and every member, and to those who never wore the “red, white and blue” but love it unconditionally. Every bit of this has been evident in the recent events.

This coming Revels will be my 40th reunion. We have invited our sophomores and our freshmen, and we hope every single one of them will attend. I know that everyone leaves Rangerettes with different experiences. We are all human, and as a line we had our ups and downs. We all had sophomores with high expectations, and we all had freshmen that we were responsible for preparing to carry on. But we all worked together to achieve a common goal, and we did that perfectly. Over time, as we grow in wisdom, we understand that all of the young women that we shared the field with are embedded in our lives. I can’t wait to see everyone!

I am humbled and blessed to be a part of this organization.

Forever yours,

Beverly Rochin Swatzell, ’75–’77, 36th Line
Rangerettes Forever president

‘Rette, Forevers remember trips that took team across U.S.

EXPECTATION VS. REALITY

The Rangerette organization has been surrounded with the highest standards and significant expectations for 77 years. The reality of it all is that the past 77 years have been filled with thousands of girls dying for the chance to wear the red, white and blue, live the dream and create memories that will last a lifetime. The reality of a Rangerette is that these expectations are nowhere short of the reality we all strive to create and achieve.

The Kilgore College Rangerettes as an organization has changed so many lives throughout the past 77 years. During these three completely different trips, one thing remained the same. That is, the Rangerette reality strives to meet expectation. The girls who try out for this organization are trying out for more than a dance team. They are trying out for a legacy. We didn’t all know what we were getting ourselves into, but I’m sure glad we all came along for the ride.

This year, the 76th and 77th Lines of the Kilgore College Rangerettes were honored with three incredible performance opportunities. In November, we performed in the 90th Annual Macy’s Thanksgiving Day Parade, followed by the 75th anniversary commemoration of the attack on Pearl Harbor in December. In January, we completed our third and final trip, to Washington, D.C., to perform at the Texas State Society’s Black Tie and Boots Presidential Inaugural Ball. This understandably overwhelming, yet incredibly exciting year led us to three different states, took us on six different planes and enabled us to conquer a day of practice doing five different high kicks. These past couple of months had many adventures in store for our team and left us extremely thankful for the cherishable memories.
NEW YORK CITY

On Nov. 20, we flew from Houston around noon to begin our first trip, to New York City. Energetic and excited, we all arrived at the hotel just a few blocks down from Times Square, ready to explore the city. Leaving no time to waste, many of us rushed into the streets with cameras out, smiles on and the same warm-up pants and jackets that we wore on the plane. If we didn’t already give away the fact that we were tourists, we were the obviously southern girls yelling and cheering about snow flurries that lasted 15 minutes and never touched the ground.

As the trip continued, we had the opportunity to go on a harbor cruise and see the Statue of Liberty up close, visit the 9/11 Memorial, attend an ever-famous showing of the Radio City Rockettes Christmas Spectacular, awe in amazement at the mesmerizing Broadway production of “Aladdin,” and of course enjoy many hours of sightseeing and free time around the island of Manhattan. When it came time for the Macy’s Thanksgiving Day Parade on Thursday morning, we awoke to the always pleasant sound of a steaming alarm clock at 3:30 a.m. Tired, excited and extremely anxious, all 72 of us pieced our uniforms together and embraced the freezing-cold morning air that rushed in between the buildings of New York City. Once the parade began, we took our places in formation and began

Last Thanksgiving, I was working for Spirit of America during the Macy’s Thanksgiving Day parade. My fellow Rangerette and suite mate, Laura Barnett Davis, owns Spirit of America. She invites several former Rangerettes to work for her as chaperones or operational staff during the Thanksgiving week. When I heard that the Rangerettes were going to perform, I quickly accepted Laura’s invitation to work in operations for Spirit of America.

At the Rangerettes Forever’s Casino Night and auction last fall, Laura donated an opportunity to walk with the Rangerettes during the parade. I was so very excited to be one of the high bidders! It was a wonderful experience, especially because I got to experience it with my two adopted Rangerettes, Hannah Burns and Lynée Elliott, and one of my sophomores, Melinda Bubak Jackson, who was the other high bidder. It was a memory that will stay with me forever.

Although I have only traveled with the Rangerettes one time, for about six summers I have chaperoned Rangerette Mini Camp. Not only do I get to spend time with former Rangerettes of all ages, I get a chance to meet the Hopefuls, which has lead to many friendships in the Rangerette lines. I always ask to be responsible for the floors that have the most Hopefuls. I become so invested in them that it is really difficult to see some very hopeful girls not make the line. It is equally exciting to watch the girls who do make it and follow them during their two years as Rangerettes. It is also wonderful to watch the freshman line take on the leadership roles that their sophomores have vacated.

It gives me so much pride and joy to see this organization continue their reputation for excellence, poise and honor year after year. Miss Gussie Nell Davis would be very proud to see how her legacy is still making a difference in many young women’s lives.
FOREVER REFLECTIONS: HAWAII

KIT ROYAL BOLTE

Outside of the performance opportunity trips I have participated in as a Forever, I have traveled with the Forevers on some very memorable trips: 2010 Rangerette Cruise; 2015 Scotland/Ireland (St. Patrick’s Day parade) and 2016 Hawaii/Pearl Harbor. My daughter and I also traveled on our own to Orlando/Disney World over spring break 2016 to watch the Rangerettes perform at the Contest of Champions.

Traveling with the Forevers and the Rangerettes is always an exciting opportunity. I enjoy the companionship of Forevers that I have already had the pleasure of meeting, and it is wonderful to get to know new Forevers. We have a unique chance to share stories and experiences from our years as Rangerettes. It is especially great to talk with Forevers who had Miss Davis and Mrs. Bolton-Covin as directors. I’ve learned some great pieces of Rangerette history from our spontaneous discussions. I also participate in the Adopt-A-’Rette program and enjoy being able to share this travel experience with my Rangerette. That makes it extra special.

This particular trip to Hawaii was special as it was the 75th commemoration of the attack on Pearl Harbor. The atmosphere of the Honolulu/Pearl Harbor area was somber as many of those in attendance had some kind of personal attachment to that event 75 years ago. Watching the Rangerettes’ beautiful performance made me extra proud to be a Rangerette Forever. Outside of the Pearl Harbor events on the 7th, we found time to hike to the top of Diamond Head, visit the Dole Plantation (DELICIOUS pineapple!) and Macadamia Nut Farm, snorkle, and attend a luau. Many wonderful photo opportunities.

I find that traveling with Forevers is especially entertaining (and often exhausting, but worth it). The group packages are great values and expose you to so many areas of travel not normally available to the average tourist. All of the Forevers that I’ve met are friendly/fun loving ladies and anxious to share their Rangerette stories. I just try to soak it all in.

HAWAII

Exactly 10 days after returning home from NYC, we made our way back to Houston to depart for Hawaii. We arrived in Honolulu on Dec. 5, and were greeted with leis as we walked off the plane. Our evening was well spent at Hard Rock Café and many pictures at Waikiki Beach. After a morning trip to Sunset Beach, we visited the Hawaiian Cultural Center, where we were given a welcome tour of the museum and were able to try some Hawaiian foods. We then went to the Ala Moana Center for a little shopping and then to the Aloha Tower Marketplace for some more shopping and to see the sunset.

We strode off and could tell ourselves “we just did that.”

performing our traditional parade routine in front of the millions of people lining the streets. The surreal feeling was definitely one to remember. I found myself making my way around the last corner and down the street, inching closer to the performance we had been preparing for. A commercial break was called, and we rushed into our places in front of Macy’s and began the high kick. Although I don’t remember much of this performance due to the nerves and adrenaline, I remember the pain of kicking with freezing cold muscles, the start of the music, and so much happiness as we strode off and could tell ourselves, “We just did that.”

practice the next day, we traveled to the USS Arizona Memorial where we spent the afternoon. On Dec. 7, we performed a patriotic high kick routine amongst a mass band at the 75th commemoration of Pearl Harbor. It was an incredible experience to be able to face the USS Missouri boat, perform in front of Pearl Harbor survivors and take part in the remembrance of such an important part of history. For the next two days, we spent our time wandering around Honolulu doing various things. On the last evening, we attended Germaine's Luau. When the time came to make our way back to the airport, I think we were all ready to be home for Christmas break; but of course, brokenhearted that we were forced to leave our little island of paradise. Our trip to Hawaii was beautiful, incredibly exciting and definitely the best way to end the semester.

OUR NATION’S CAPITAL

On Jan. 17, a small group of Rangerettes headed to Washington, D.C., to begin the third and final trip. The selected Rangerettes were chosen according to grade-point average because we would be missing the entire first week of school. We all wished more than anything that our entire class could have the opportunity to travel together one last time. However, the 19 of us were very thankful to be a part of such a supportive and encouraging class that wished us well. Upon arrival in Washington, D.C., we attended dinner at The Monocle Restaurant. We spent the entire next day in the city. Cramming our sightseeing into one day, we visited as many monuments and toured as many museums as we could. Fighting
Since 1991, those duties have been varied and numerous. Jamerson, who studied journalism at Panola College, started in KC’s print shop. She worked there two years before assisting the fashion-merchandising department and later three business-administration department chairs. She was assisting Gerald Stanglin, vice president of instruction, in 2000 when Archie Whitfield retired from his college-relations position.

"It was like it was a job description just written for me — newsletter experience, event coordination, customer service — all the things that I had a good background in and experience," Jamerson said. "So I applied and got it."

And the alumni work began.

"My job was to be the liaison between former students and the current institution to help them stay connected or reconnect, to help them come back home and enjoy themselves and to fundraise for the current Rangerettes, twirlers and cheerleaders," she said.

The alumni, current students and co-workers who witnessed Jamerson’s work saw how it extended beyond her job description as she infused her own skills and talents.

"Paula has had about three jobs: party planner, decorator, and director of publications that connect KC with these various groups," retired KC President Dr. Bill Holda said. "The office of the president was in its original form since the McLaurin Administration Building when Dr. Watson was president. A few years ago, Paula worked with Nancy Law and Karol Pruett to create a memorable renovation of the office, and in particular, a KC wall that captures the history of the institution.

"For my retirement reception, Paula went over the top. Even to the point of creating plant holders that were covered with various pictures from my entire career. She is a worker and always adds a special touch."

Jamerson shared her skills in multiple ways. Off and on for about a decade, she invited Rangerettes to work with her.

"It gave me an opportunity to teach them how to coordinate and plan a party," she said.

She and her workers also created items to sell in the Rangerette Showcase and Museum.

"Some of that was to give the girls working for me an opportunity to learn some business skills and to save some money for the Showcase to get a better price and get a better profit," said Jamerson, who has a Kilgore College degree in business.

Ivette Armenta, 71st Line, worked for Jamerson her sophomore year.

"When I think of Paula, I think of compassion, empathy, and pure joy," Armenta said. "I’m not sure if these qualities can be learned, but I did learn how much of an impact they can have on the people around you. Her spirit is contagious, and looking back at experiences I’ve had over the years, I’ve realized I seek people like her in my life."

Working with Rangerettes in her office and with the organization as a whole taught Jamerson, originally from Carthage, more about these dancers than she’d learned as an East Texan or working in other college departments.

"The self-discipline that they teach the girls is just inspiring," Jamerson said. "You see these girls go through the program, and they become can-do women who are going to be successful in any area that they go after because they’ve learned what they can accomplish if they are willing to work hard and be persistent."

Jamerson’s own hard work earned admiration from those whose lives she touched. She was among those to whom Revels 2008 was dedicated, among other honors.

“I remember how shocked, surprised and honored I was when Shannon Harty Phillips and the Forevers endowed a scholarship in my name,” Jamerson said.

The job also taught her important lessons about people.

“Any time you’re coordinating and organizing volunteers, it’s got tricky pieces to it,” she said. “I always made sure I let people know how much I appreciate their help.”

But the best part of her time at Kilgore College was the friends she made, she said.

“(My favorite part has been) the people that I’ve gotten an opportunity to work with and work for,” Jamerson said. “I have some lifelong friends from it.”

And those friends echo the sentiment.

“I already miss seeing her sweet smile on our campus,” Blair said. "She has a heart of gold and is one of the hardest-working people I know. She is so loved by so many of my girls, and she could not have been more gracious and loving to them. I love her colorful and fun spirit, and I know she will continue to impact everyone who knows her."

Jamerson decided to retire after her husband’s health declined sharply late last year.

“It would be my honor and my privilege to retire and take care of him myself,” Jamerson said. “It’s marriage-vow appropriate. He would do it for me if I needed it.”

In addition to caring for her spouse, Jamerson plans to stay busy making and selling jewelry and custom gifts, working in her yard and visiting her five grandchildren.

And she hopes to stay involved in Kilgore College, too, she said.

“I plan to attend the retiree events that I have hosted for the last 17 years,” she said. “I would love to volunteer on some level when I can.”

through the brisk wind and our aching feet, we were able to see the Washington Monument, sit on the steps under Abraham Lincoln’s memorial, and even take a Washington, D.C., subway. The Texas State Society’s Black Tie and Boots Presidential Inaugural Ball was held at the Gaylord Hotel on Jan. 19.

We opened the evening in a VIP ballroom with a performance of the traditional officer strut, high kick and Texas jazz.

As the night continued, there were meet-and-greets and many, many pictures taken. At 12:30 a.m., we performed for an even larger audience in a different ballroom. It was exciting to hear how many people recognized the uniform and knew who we were. One last night was spent in Washington, D.C., before we traveled back to our little town of Kilgore.

Three states, six plane rides and countless memories later, we could not have experienced a better sophomore year. ★
A match made in Kilgore

Adopt-an-active program nurtures lasting friendships

BY ASHLEY AUSTIN JONES

The Rangerette Forever adoption program can yield a great deal of support for current Rangerettes, as well as give Forevers a way to stay active within the organization. After sign drop, each line member is matched with a Forever who will serve as a mentor and direct connection to the Forever organization during her time as a Rangerette. These relationships often result in friendships that last well beyond a Rangerette’s two years at Kilgore College, as is the case for Holly Williams Lyons (1993–95) and adoptee Katie Reeves (2008–10).

Lyons chose to adopt Reeves because they lived near each other in Austin. Although they did not previously know each other, Lyons introduced herself to Reeves at Show-offs in 2008.

“At the conclusion of freshman year Show-offs, she came walking through the masses on stage and introduced herself to me,” Reeves said. “I had no idea who she was and didn’t even expect to be adopted. When I got back to the dorm, I found in my mailbox a hoodie from the showcase with a note tucked in it, which I keep in my memory box and look back on every so often as the beginning of a storied friendship.”
They kept in touch through social media and text messaging, as well as in-person visits as often as possible.

“When (Katie) was home, we would always meet up for coffee or lunch,” Lyons said. “She would tell me about her current Rangerette life, and we shared many stories of our experiences. During her sophomore year, I was able to travel and see her perform several times.”

Over time, they learned that they had several things in common, including both being “tall girls,” both standing on the 49½ yard line and both wearing No. 41 at tryouts.

“I was excited to be adopted by someone I could see and talk to in person as often as we did, and I always enjoyed hearing about the previous generation of Rangerettes and the way things ran in previous decades,” Reeves said. “Rangerettes is fairly traditional, but things do phase in and out over time.”

After leaving Kilgore, Reeves attended Stephen F. Austin University, Lyons’ alma mater. Both women were dance majors and continued to share many commonalities.

“I was lucky enough to have Katie as my student teacher her last semester in school,” Lyons said. “It was a special experience to be able to mentor someone you think highly of and have established a friendship with through the years. Eventually, I was able to hire her as my first full-time assistant at Vandegrift High School. We had a blast working and learning together for three years.”

“You can play an important role in a current Rangerette’s experience and enrich her years more than you know. In some cases, you may be friends for her time there and, in other cases, you may develop a long-term, even lifelong connection.”

KATIE Reeves
69TH LINE

Their relationship continues today.

“We are still friends and are both currently high school dance team head directors in Leander ISD,” Reeves said. “There are several collaborative dance events in our district, and so we still work together, just in a different way. She has certainly been a mentor to me as I navigated the start of my directing career.”

Stories of mentoring and friendship like that of Lyons and Reeves are common within the Rangerette organization, but can only continue if Forevers continue to adopt active Rangerettes.

“My advice is to jump in and give it a shot,” Lyons said. “If you’re apprehensive, set some Forever goals for yourself, and do your best. Having an adoptee is fun and meaningful for both parties.”

Lyons has adopted several active Rangerettes since Reeves and plans to continue to adopt.

“I think the best way to support your adoptee is to make regular contact with them,” Lyons said. “Everyone has their own way and style of doing this. Forever should choose what works best with their life and schedule so they are consistent with their adoptee, whether that means sending flowers and care packages or texting them regularly. I think adoptees just want a connection with their Forever and to feel supported from alumni.”

Reeves has adopted active Rangerettes since leaving Kilgore and said her decision to adopt was heavily influenced by her relationship with Lyons.

“Especially in those few years after leaving Kilgore, I wanted to stay connected and feel the excitement that I sorely missed. It was rewarding to have conversations with my adopted girls and see what had changed, what was the same, and hear their takes on each part of their years. It was a little different from my Forever relationship, as I didn’t adopt Austin girls, so our connection was dependent on my routine visits to football games, Show-offs, Revels, etc.,” Reeves said.

Reeves and Lyons agree that the bonds created through the Rangerette adoption program can greatly impact members of the current line.

“It is as involved as you want it to be,” Reeves said. “You can play an important role in a current Rangerette’s experience and enrich her years more than you know. In some cases, you may be friends for her time there and, in other cases, you may develop a long-term, even life-long connection. Start with one active member, then build up from there if you’re feeling it! There’s nothing to lose.”★

ADOPTION IS EASY
It’s never too late to adopt a Rangerette. Send an email to RetteAdoption@gmail.com with the name of the Rangerette you’d like to adopt or to request an assignment. The goal is for each Rangerette to have multiple Forever, so adopting a Rangerette with a fellow alumna is an option. If you adopted a freshman Rangerette last year, you keep her as your adoptee her sophomore year. After adopting her, please contact your Rangerette at least three times a month — by email, phone, social media or a letter/card.

ONE OUT OF THREE plans to attend Texas A&M University, Whoop!
Jen Gray Morrow’s career is her passion. She has the privilege to direct a high school drill team and teach dance.

What made you want to become a Rangerette?
My high school drill team included members who were sophomores through seniors. Therefore, my freshman year, I took a drill team prep class. During that class, my teacher/the director of the drill team introduced me to the Rangerettes by showing my class a video of the Rangerettes halftime performance at a football game she attended that fall. From there, three things happened: I fell in love with the Rangerettes, my goal was to become one, and I knew deep down I wanted my future to be directing a drill team. (Very specific and high dreams for just a little freshman in high school.) The Rangerettes are the best of the best, the cream of the crop, and who wouldn’t want to be a part of the regal, poised, class act perfection?

What is the best compliment anyone has paid you?
The most wonderfully unexpected compliment anyone has ever paid me would be telling me that I can get along with anyone and everyone. People fascinate me, and I always want to learn more about them ... their likes, dislikes, what they do for a living, etc.

What are you most proud of?
I am most proud of the fact that I can balance being a good mother and work full time. I have two little girls, 5 and 7 ... 7 going on 17, actually. I’ll be honest, at first it was a challenge to figure it out, but I finally did, and I’m so grateful. All moms know the self guilt that creeps in, etc.

What Rangerette experience shaped you the most?
I had MANY experiences with my time at Kilgore that shaped me into the woman I am now. However, specifically it was the ability to gain confidence in myself as a young woman as well as learn to speak professionally to different types of people in different types of situations. I am forever thankful for this as it is used every day in my profession.

What is your grand, audacious goal?
My grand, audacious goal in life is to touch the lives of as many young women as I can. I want to awaken their curiosity, help them find their creative voices, help them better themselves as individuals and in all human beings in this world.
